Biography

Kristen Smith is a graphic designer from Glens Falls, New York who works in a hybrid remote position for a New York State government agency in Albany. Being single and working in a largely remote position, Kristen is looking for more ways to socialize and interact with other creative professionals and like-minded individuals. Recently, Kirsten looked into portrait drawing classes through The Shirt Factory, an incubator of art studios in downtown Glens Falls.

Kristen loves pursuing activities outdoors in the nearby Adirondacks which include kayaking, hiking and downhill skiing.

Motivations

- Finds it stimulating to be outdoors in nature
- Enjoys using her creative skills to accomplish professional tasks

Frustrations

- Recent changes and shifting roles in design-based professions due to generative AI tools (Adobe Firefly, DALL-E, Stable Diffusion) can often feel overwhelming
- Working in a hybrid remote position, it sometimes can be challenging communicating or obtaining constructive feedback from co-workers
